Stranded War Vessels At Navy Yard.

GLOUCESTER WILL BE THE FIRST ONE TO BE TACKLED. FLOAT HER-WORK TO COM-MENCE THIS WEEK.

The big dredge Caucus of the engineering department of the army, which has been at work on Fensacola bar for the past year, has been secured by the navy department, and for some weeks her services will be required by that department in an effort to float the numerous gunboats, tugboats and barges that are aground at the navy yard.

It is the intention of the navy department, it is stated by those from the navy yard, to convert the Caucus into a pontoon dredge, or in other refuse conveyed into the bins it will piped off to whatever point is de-

The plan is to dredge a channel from the stranded vessels on the beach to deep water, and also around the wrecks, so that with the assistance of a strong towboat they will slide nto the deep water without injury and if not too badly damaged,

The Gloucester, the gunboat that Commander Wainwright famons is to be the first one to be tackled by the dredge. She is restin a better position than the Vixen and other gunboats. The tug Accomac and coal barge No. 1 will also to be floated in this manner if Why it should not.

The new life saving station on Santa Rosa Island, with quarters for cane. The fearful beating of the gulf during the blow so leveled the island that the place is entirely too big sea would break over the buildings, and as a consequence it is heieved and will probably be recommended that the new station be constructed at least a mile to the westward, or else at some point having a higher elevation, so as to at least protect the buildings.

Capt. W. A. Hutchins, superin-Fensacola and Big Bayou will be re- work of rebuilding and repairing its the situation, and that afterwards a commission would be formed to select a site for the station, as it is inadvisable to place any new buildings at the point formerly occupied. If the commission does not decide on a site about a mile to the westward, which will probably be recommended by the superintendent, then some other location will have to be chosen in his opinion, even if land other than that now in possession of the light house department has to be secured. Captain Hutchins stated that a new station would be built with ample quarters for the captain and crew, but at present he could not state when the work would commence, but will probably be in a position to do so some time during the latter portion of this week.

Yesterday Lieut. Bryans carried Capt. Hutchins on the Penrose for some distance along the island, and succeeded in recovering a large portion of the gear and other equipment carried away by the storm.
